A message from our Trust Chaplain...

They say that with age comes wisdom, but I have noticed recently that with age also comes grey hair - especially with all the hairdressers being closed for so long!

It has made me realise just how much in our everyday lives we take for granted. To walk past the closed shops on the high street, day after day, week after week and then, month after month made me feel sad...even though I have walked past the same shops for years and not really paid much attention to them!

With the shops tentatively re-opening, I decided to venture out to see what the feeling was along the high street. It was as if there had been a heavy downpour and then the sun came out; everything seemed fresh and clean, people were smiling and politely keeping the 2m distance rule. Shopkeepers were overwhelmingly happy to see their customers again. I wandered first into the flower shop. It felt refreshingly calm and looked so pretty. I could feel the beginnings of a way forward from the dark and cobweb days of the virus, into a future where we remember to say good morning or good afternoon to others; where we treat those serving our needs with respect and kindness and where we have the wisdom to stand back, with patience, never taking for granted how lucky we really are.

One advantage of my hairdresser being closed for so long is that I have realised that people are not judging me on the colour of my hair! I have tried wearing a hat, a hairband, a scarf, a plait... but, at the end of the day, it makes no difference to the people who love me regardless of how grey my hair might be. They will love me anyway! This said, I will never take my hairdresser for granted again!

God Bless,

Mrs Darwin
